AN OPTIONAL COURSE ON SUBSTANCE ABUSE

For medical student and primary care physician educators, these lectures have been reviewed and updated by Professor Charles P. O'Brien. He notes that the biggest news is the opioid epidemic. This was influenced by the concern about not neglecting pain as an important symptom. We started teaching doctors about the safety and benefits of prescription opioids. At least one pharma company aggressively (“allegedly”) marketed their product as having low addiction risk. Medical students and residents received very little training on the proper way to prescribe opioids and how to treat pain in a multi-disciplinary program. Also, supplies of opioids leaked out to the street market. Not only did the abuse of opioids increase, but it fueled heroin use which was usually cheaper than prescription opioids.

Students should be taught the risks and benefits of opioids, the non-opioid methods to treat pain, the opioid addiction medications in combination with counseling/psychotherapy. Important medications include methadone, buprenorphine (Suboxone), naltrexone and extended release naltrexone (Vivitrol) and naloxone (Narcan) for overdose.

We have summarized the entire course in two lectures, reviewed and compiled by Mujeeb Shad, M.D. Teachers may use the two lectures OR the entire 14 lecture series.

Summary Lectures

Psychopharmacology of Addiction.....21.1 – 21.64
Charles P. O'Brien, M.D., Ph.D., Mujeeb Shad, M.D.

Neurobiology Addictions: Part I and II22.1 – 22.111
