DEADLINE

December 16, 2024, 5:00 PM Eastern

Timeline for submissions

December 9 - Chair Starts Proposal & Adds Participants by this date

It is recommended that the chair starts the proposal and adds participants by this date so each of the participants has a chance to submit their part of the proposal. Please note that the submission cannot be finalized until all individual participants fill out their portion.

December 15 - Submission of Individual Speaker Abstracts Due

We recommend that participants submit their individual abstracts and financial disclosures by December 15 so the chair will have time to review and finalize the submission by the deadline.

December 16 by 5pm EST - Chairs Review & Finalize Proposed Session

All participants must have an established profile in RSA, or one will need to be created. If you had a profile in the old system, please use the same email address but click “forgot my password” if it is the first time logging in. A new password will be sent to you. You can create your own password by updating your profile.

Program Proposals

Program proposals are solicited within three general themes; biological/preclinical, psychosocial/medical/clinical and translational research, and must include alcohol research. When designing the proposal, organizers are encouraged to use an integrative approach, with the goal of making the presentations relevant to a rather broad audience of alcohol researchers by doing one or both of the following:

1. Integrate research across disciplines and levels of organization, e.g., molecular, biology, neuroscience, psychology, and population science. This should be done explicitly both in the presentations and in the discussant’s comments.
2. Focus on differences and commonalities between alcohol and other drugs. This can be with reference to mechanisms of action, patterns of use, or consequences of use.

STATEMENTS and GUIDELINES RE: ADDICTION TERMINOLOGY: The Research Society on Alcohol and the journal Alcohol: Clinical and Experimental Research recommends against the use of terminology that can stigmatize people who use alcohol, drugs, other addictive substances or who have an addictive behavior. Adherence to these guidelines will be considered when reviewing program proposal submissions. Click for more details: <https://researchsocietyonalcohol.org/about/terminology-guidelines>

Program Themes

- Biological/Preclinical: refers to non-human based research in areas such as ontogenetic, physiological, genetic, cognitive/behavioral, or neurobiological studies, as well as research in pre-clinical models of alcohol intake and alcohol-related disorders.
- Psychosocial/Medical/Clinical: refers to human-based research that includes physiological or non-physiological studies of cognition, behavior, or social factors, along with epidemiological and prevention research. Includes basic laboratory-based physiological research with humans (with or without medications/alcohol), clinical trials, human neuroimaging, and genetic studies.
- Translational: refers to studies that are explicitly designed to cross usual disciplinary boundaries, e.g., biomarker and function, laboratory-based and clinical outcome, human and non-human on a specific behavioral outcome, the application of results from clinical studies to clinical practice. TRANSLATIONAL designation will be confirmed through the review process; make sure the talks cohesively include cross-disciplinary findings.

Proposal Category

The program category is primarily used to assign reviewers. The list is divided into three areas (Biological/Preclinical, Psychosocial/Medical/Clinical, Translational) with various research categories under each area. CLICK HERE for a list of categories.

Diversity

Proposals that highlight diversity in topic including, but not limited to cultural, stereotypes, gender, race, ethnicity, URM, generational are strongly encouraged and will be noted during the review process and indicated in the final program.

Diversity in participants including, but not limited to, gender, race, ethnicity, additional diversity-related characteristics, geographical (international representation), career level are strongly encouraged and will be noted during the review process.

The Committee strongly encourages both junior and senior researchers to submit proposals. Special consideration will be given to proposals that include diversity reflected by gender, race, ethnicity, additional diversity-related characteristics, geographical, career level.

Additionally, organizers should include participants from different institutions (including from outside the United States) to provide diverse viewpoints. Proposals examining the impact and/or intersectionality of racial disparities; health disparities; or those with an alcohol and comorbidity aspect (i.e., biomedical, substance use, mental health, COVID-19) are encouraged.

Program Formats

Symposium

A symposium is a 90-minute session intended to highlight progress and exciting new developments in a field.

The Chair is required to submit the Overall Abstract, Speaker Abstracts are required for each presentation and should be submitted by the presenter. All participants are required to submit a financial conflict of interest disclosure.

All symposia will begin with a 5-minute introduction by the Chair(s) (3 slide limit) followed by data presentations that will each be 20 minutes in duration (including Q+A). The symposium Chair should decide how to allocate time between presentation and questions (e.g., 17-minute talk followed by 3 minutes of questions).

Each symposium is to have 1 chair and may have a co-chair (optional). Each session should follow one of the two following formats, and Chairs should indicate which of these two formats they will follow:

- Three (3) data-driven talks, followed by one 25-minute Discussant slot. For this format, Discussants will be expected to use discussion time to integrate findings from prior talks, share thoughts on future directions and challenges in the field, and facilitate interaction between speakers and the audience. The Discussant should be named in the overall abstract, with a very brief description of their planned remarks. The Discussant does not need to submit an individual abstract.
- Four (4) data-driven talks. In this format, the Chair will facilitate individual Q&A after each talk, as well as a short 5-minute panel Q&A/discussion at the end of the session.

Workshop

A workshop is a 90-minute session intended to focus on new, developing, or established research or clinical questions or problems that may be helped by open discussion.

The Chair is required to submit the Overall Abstract, Speaker Abstracts are required for each presentation and should be submitted by the presenter. All participants are required to submit a financial conflict of interest disclosure.

They should comprise an introduction by chair or co-chair (5 minutes) in which the topic is outlined, and questions or goals are presented, followed by either:

- Three (3) presentations consisting of 20-minute talks each and a 25-minute open discussion at the end.
- Four (4) presentations consisting of 15-minute talks each and a 25-minute open discussion at the end.

Round Table

A round table is a 90-minute session intended to present controversial points of view in a format that encourages a lively exchange and participation.

They should comprise a brief introduction by chair or co-chair followed by up to six (6) presentations/discussions (one per participant) of different viewpoints and a 25-minute open discussion at the end.

Speaker Abstracts are not accepted for this format, but all participants will need to submit their financial conflict of interest disclosure and agree to the terms of presentation before the submission deadline.

Oral Presentation Limitations

Individuals may give only one oral (talk) presentation. When inviting your speakers, confirm they have not already been invited to speak (presenter or longer discussant) in another symposium, workshop, or round table. Keeping in mind the “one-talk” limit, there is also a two proposed sessions involvement (chair, co-chair, discussant) limit - no individual may participate in more than two sessions (any role and any format). Presenting an introduction as a chair or being a discussant does not count as an oral presentation (i.e., Dr. Jones can present an oral presentation in one session and be a chair or discussant in one session; another example: a person can serve as chair on a proposal in which they are also a proposed speaker or discussant). If a listed individual is a proposed speaker on more than one proposal or a participant (i.e., intro, chair, discussant) on more than two proposals, RSA/ISBRA Program Committee chairs will solicit a replacement for that individual prior to proposal review – if a replacement is not provided within the allotted time frame, the proposal will be administratively withdrawn.

NOTE: All oral presentations are in-person only; no virtual/digital presentation options will be offered (e.g., pre-recorded talks or live streams).

NOTE: If you need additional presenters for your session, you can search the Program Interest List for potential program participants.

Affirmation of Assurance

RSA/ISBRA does not provide funds or waive registration for participants in Symposia, Workshops or Round Tables. It is the organizer’s responsibility to inform all participants that, if the proposal is accepted, they are required to register for the meeting.

Industry Sponsorship - prohibited

For-profit Corporations (or foundations of for-profit corporations) are not permitted to sponsor any symposia, workshops or round tables or networking events.

Disclosure Form Requirements

All chairs, discussants/question moderators and speakers are required to complete a Financial Conflict-of-Interest Disclosure form. This form will be included in the submission process.

Proposal Review Criteria

Quality (overall); Appeal/Timeliness (not a re-hashing of old data, includes unpublished findings, new to the audience); Integration (bridging different types of research); Broad Approach(es) to topic of interest; International Representation; Innovation/Novelty; and Broad Representation (more than 1 lab; inclusion of graduate students, postdocs and/or junior faculty members). Please note that proposal rejection is possible based on reviews and/or number of submissions received.

Submission Requirements

All participants must have an established profile in RSA, or one will need to be created. If you had a profile in the old system, please use the same email address but click “forgot my password” if it is the first time logging in. A new password will be sent to you. You can create your own password by updating your profile.
